MAY 29 1997

Dear Resident:

MAYWOOD INTERIM STORAGE SITE - 1996 ENVIRONMENTAL SURVEILLANCE INFORMATION

As you may know, the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) has a comprehensive program to monitor the environment at the Maywood Interim Storage Site (MISS), located on Hunter Avenue in Maywood. Until recently, a soil storage pile that contained low levels of radioactive material was maintained at the site. The pile is now gone. Its removal was completed last December.

Other soils in the ground at the site still contain radioactive material. Therefore, our environmental surveillance program continues to be an important measure to help ensure that no radioactive materials associated with the site pose elevated health risks to the public. At and around the site, monitoring devices have been used to keep check on the quality of air, water, and sediment. The monitoring devices are analyzed in laboratories throughout each year and the resulting data are studied in detail.

DOE has completed its interpretation and analysis of environmental surveillance data gathered during 1996 for MISS. This letter summarizes the results.

Environmental surveillance activities conducted at MISS included:

- annual analysis of groundwater samples for radiological and chemical parameters;
- semiannual analysis of sediment samples for radiological parameters, and annual analysis of sediment samples for metals;
- semiannual external gamma dose measurements;
- semiannual radiological analysis of atmospheric radon-220 (thoron) and radon-222 concentrations;
- annual measurement of radon-222 flux (the emission rate of radon-222 from the surface of the storage pile);
- and
- annual analysis of surface water for radiological constituents and metals.

Results from the 1996 environmental surveillance are similar to results from previous years, confirming that no current public drinking water sources are being affected by the site and that there are no significant radiological doses to the public as a result of materials at the site. Based on site surveillance data and local land usage, potential human exposures are well below applicable DOE and Environmental Protection Agency limits.

Resident

Concentrations of radon-220, a decay product of thorium-232 (the site's primary contaminant), did exceed the DOE limit at four locations during the first half of 1996. The DOE limit is 3.0 picocuries per liter (pCi/L). The exceedances were very slight, ranging from 3.39 to 3.87 pCi/L. In the summer of 1996, radon mitigation activities were performed on an onsite area with subsurface thorium contamination (where three of the four exceedances were detected). When measurements were collected at the end of the year in the same area, the number of exceedances dropped from three to one. As with most concentrations of gases in an open, unconfined area, the radon concentrations dissipate within seconds and do not affect the offsite population.

Full copies of the technical memorandum regarding the environmental surveillance program are available by calling 1-800-253-9759. The toll-free number listed here rings an answering machine which is checked frequently throughout each day.

Sincerely,

John Michael Japp, Site Manager
Former Sites Restoration Division
